Even this moderate concession in the direction of representative government has only been obtained after many and if they ringed the thing aimed at retained difficulties, and it comes clogged with all the drawbacks which indifferentism are sure to that he might carry on the business. Mr. impose. Thus we find the Royal Instructions sent out re the reconstitution of the all the defendants were discharged. Council are in two or three points open to two constructions, and are altogether vague and loosely worded. Moreover, the number of unofficial members proposed by Sir GEORGE BOWEN was cut down, seemingly from mere love of dictation; the General Commanding the Forces was refused a seat on the Legislative Council in spite of the Governor's urgent wish to that effect; and the Colonial Treasurer was debarred from sitting in the Executive Council, in defiance of precedent in other Crown Colonies, and for no conceivable motive save a spirit of contradiction. Nevertheless we have gained grains of scetate of lead in one gallon of water something substantial. The really unofficial to which 30 grains of urine had been added. Moreover, two of the unofficial members are the chosen of two representative bodies, the Chamber of Commerce and the Bench of Justices of the Peace, and it may therefore with good reason be affirmed that the comwithin the scope of the CHRONICLE and | munity will have some voice in the deliberations of the Council if they have little real control over its decisions. So long as the nresent Head of the Executive remains here. however, they will also enjoy a share in the disposal of the public funds, a privilege that most assuredly was never vouchsafed in the troubled administration of his predecessor in office. It is intended to inaugurate the opening same method of procedure and ceremonies as are observed in Ceylon, Mauritius, and other Crown Colonies. There will be a guard of honour to receive the Governor, as representative of Her Majesty, who will open the Session by reading his address, reviewing the position of the Colony, naming the measures to come before the Council for discussion, and indicating the legislation that should be undertaken. This concluded, the Council will adjourn for a time, to give the members an opportunity of considering the address, after which a reply will be prepared and proposed by one of the members, upon which and the address discussion will ensue. Of course a good deal of all this is formality, but the boing sent back to Cairo. necessary, by a crew from the Victor Emanuel and her supernumeraries. 4.—In no instance have the services of a manof war been required at a Treaty Port when they were not forthcoming.

5.—The Vice-Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce in his letter of the 6th October, 1883. states that the communities at the different Treaty Ports have from time to time remonstrated against the inadequate protection given to them by the Naval Authorities. I can only state that, during the period of my command no such remonstrance has ever been made to me, roopt that contained in the letter Chamber of Commerce dated 18th April last, my reply to which is enclosed. 6.—The Consul of Shanghai in June last to quested me to detach a corvette and sloop to reard the settlement during the visit of the Vicercy Li Hung-chang. As I considered that this would be an insult to that distinguished and onlightened statesman, I declined to send the corvette, the Daring and Kestrel being already in the Woosang River. 7 .- Sir Harry Parkes, in a letter dated 19th September last, written at the moment of vie arrival at Tientain from Japan, alluded to the presence of only two small vessels in the neighbourhood of Hongkong, and I took the opportunity of pointing out to him that while the Swift and Espoir were at Canton, there were still available at Hongkong the two gunboats

J. H. STEWART-LOCKHART, p. Colonial Secretary. ALLEGED ASSAULTS ON THE RACE-COURSE.

A special sitting of the Police Court was hel at four o'clock yesterday afternoon, before Mr. A. G. Wise, to investigate two charges of assault brought by Mr. Brandt, of Shanghai, against Mesers. Nickels and Dunman, alleged to have been committed on the Race Course during the running of the Champions' Race on Friday last. Messrs. Dunman and Nickels were both present, as were also many gentlemen connected with or interested in horse racing in China. All wit-

The evidence given was as follows:-Oscar Brandt said—I am a broker. This affair happened in the Champions' Roce, the last i race on Friday. It must have been later than open with a wide space for him to go where he six o'clock for it was nearly dark when we started for the race. I rode the pony Odewara, and Mr. Nickels rode the pony Rose. After we had so badly. gone two thirds of the distance I went ahead and led the field by about two lengths. At the two pile post I was against the rails, and had gone back a little, and was not so far ahead. when Mr. Nickels ran his pony up against mine, drove it against the rails, and taking his whip he struck my pony two or three times across the men the same things I have just stated, the face and nose, and the whip also struck me on the thigh. I think he intended to strike me and you not say that being close behind, and seeing to hit wherever he could. My right leg was badly bruised and in danger of being broken by you doing. Dunman?"-That is what he said. being driven against the rails, my pony stopped, and Mr. Nickels went on. I have nothing else to state in this case, but I desire to call Mr. Bidwell.

His Worship-Do you wish to ask may quesions, Mr. Nickela? The defendant-None: I wish to call Mr. Mr. Brandt-He has been in the court all the time I have been giving my evidence. His Worship-Mr. Dunman had better go out of the court; he is not connected with this

Mr. Danman rose to leave, but Mr. Nickels the year-September to March inclusive—the said it did not matter; he would not call any Henry Bidwell said-I am a common merchant. I was riding in the Champions' Race.

Witness-I heard it. Mr. Brandt-Did you not tell Mr. Leage distinotly you saw it? Witness-No; I heard it; he was too far ahead.

Did you not tell me personally, in the presence of Mr. Ruege, that you saw it most distinctly? Did you not tell Mr. Ruegg in the presence of Mr. Ryrie that you had seen it?- Heard it.

You have made a mistake between seeing and I mean seeing it; did you not say you saw it? -Well, I deny it. I heard it, but I was too far behind to absolutely see it. The result of the thing must have been that I heard it. The way that Mr. Brandt's pony swerved from bis exceedingly bad ciding of the race, which ought never to have existed-

His Worship-Your witness does not correborate your story altogether, Mr. Brandt. Mr. Brandt-I can bring a number of witnesses to prove he told them he saw it. Witness—It does not matter. His Worship—He has admitted that already; he admits he told Mr. Porter and the other gentlemen be saw it. Witness-I have admitted it. Mr. Brandt -He told dozens of people, and now he declines to come forward and state it for me

Witness-May I make a remark? His Worship-Yes, if it is pertinent to the Witness-It all originated in Mr. Brandt's bad riding, and whatever Mr. Nickels may have done, and probably did, and whatever Mr. Dunman may have done, arose from it.

His Worship-You deny striking the com-

They were both riding badly. There was no deliberation in anything Mr. Dunman did. Mr. Brandt—I have the same witnesses for this particular case-Mr. Ruegg, who saw it distinotly, and the mafoo, who saw the same thing. His Worship-In this case the witness cays he saw Mr. Danman touch you. Witness-I saw him touch you, but I don't think he did it intentionally; he only did it to save you from capsising him. Mr. Brandt-Perhaps it was a joke of Mr.

Dunman's, but I do not like such jokes. His Worship-Do you mish to ask any questions, Mr. Dunman P Defendant-I would like to ask how far Mr. Brandt was from the rails; whether he was not three or four yards from the rails when we came into contact with each other. YEWS. The recent death of a man in England from eating leaves of vew sets at rest a question over which some doubt still appeared to linger. Writers on botany and arboriculture, even a few years ago, speke in a hesitating and uncertain way about the alleged poisonous properties of the tree. They teld us how cases of death "apparently well authenticated" had been reported in France and other countries; but, even while they made mention of such tales, they rather shirked any downright assertion that a man would die if he ate freely of yew-leaves. This incredulity was, perhaps, the natural result of discovering that many old world stories told to the prejudice of the tree are entirely devoid of truth. Thus, to take first | the most exaggerated of all these fables, it has been shown by the most practical proof had seen a party of seventeen persons! breakfasting coolly, in the hollow trunk of the vew in Tisbury church-yard, and would have warned them that their hilarity would soon be exchanged for howls of pain and succeeded by the silence of death.

Other antique myths represented men as dving in consequence of drinking wine that had been kept in a cask made of vew; and it was even suggested that a cup might be made of this wood and used for presenting a draught to any one whom it was desired to get rid of. It was known that one distinguished barbarian, Cativolous, King of the Eburones, had committed suicide by devouring some parts of the yew tree; and the Romans, who are not fond of making experiments on themselves, rushed to the conclusion that every part of the tree was equally nexicus and fatal. There were some indeed, and perhaps still may be, who maintain that the word "toxic" is merely a. derivation or corruption from "taxus." the yew, which, according to their view, was the earliest known sort of poison in Italy. Another example of the absurdity of the legends propagated about this mysterious tree is the solemn assurance given by some loarned wiseacre that by driving a brass , nail into the trunk all barmful properties are destroyed. The researches of modern botanists have, by slow and cautious stops. ascertained that no part of the tree, except its leaves, contain any deadly poison. The scarlet berries, which were once of course believed to contain the very essence of all that was taxic and toxic, are now declared to be perfectly innocuous. The outer part of these fruits, which are greedily sought after by thrushes and other birds, is composed of a gelatinous pulp, " very sweet and pleasant to the taste," and within it is a sort of kernel, having a " sweet and agreeable writty flaunur." Maranus, the office of eating even the leaves vary greatly with it in Mithridatic fashion until it can be taken almost unmixed.

Yow trees have furnished an inexhaustible subject of argument and conjecture to the ecclesiastical antiquary. Why were they planted in churchyards? Here are a fewonly a few-of the explanations that have and trustworthy among these people. been given by various worthies. They were chosen by the early church builders as being the only indigenous evergroon, and thus available, at all times, for making wreaths for adorning graves. They were the most long-lived trees known in Britain, and therefore, the most suitable emblem of every well-ordered garden. But Pope and to learn, and which no stranger had yet been Duke and Duchess of Norfolk have contributed Nemo other tyrants of fashion thought fit to able to lovestigate. succeeding centuries—for it lives well over lides of another life. 1,000 years it becomes round-beaded, and more dense in foliage. The tallest yew in England seems to be the one in Harlington churchyard, which is 58 feet high and the largest trunk is believed to be that at is said to have courted Anne Boleyn in the days when she was no more than a waiting woman.—Globe.

"RUM AND RELIGION" IN MADAGASCAR

The Rev. G. A., Shaw, writing in the Pall

Hall Gazette, describes missionary work in Madagascar: -- Arriving at nine or ten o'clock, we find the children assembled formed into classes each under its own monitor, and engaged in very much the same routine as their youthful compeers in the Board school of this country. After spending some time in examining the scholars, instructing the teacher, and correcting his methods, teaching a new hymn and tune, and giving a short address, we go into the village and visit the people in their houses, while our men buy and cook some rice for themselves, and the most intelligent among them catches, kills, and cooks a fowl for our breakfast.
